The in vitro binding of methylmercury to peptidyl-prolyl cis-trans-isomerase, a protein involved in the post-translational modification of other proteins, is analyzed in terms of free energy and enthalpy. The pK(a) of the peptide donor is used to calculate relative binding affinities, and the enthalpies of binding of all methylmercury species to the enzyme are obtained from experiments. The binding free energy of CH₃Hg(2+) is lower than that of CH₃g(+) and Hg(+) by as much as 8.6 kcal/mol. The binding free energy of Me(2)Hg(+) is slightly lower than that of Me(3)Hg(+). Comparison of calculated and measured binding constants suggests that the enzyme possesses the common binding site for both organomercury compounds. 2d92ce491b
