Automatic nuclei centroid detector. By Michael Barisani.

This toolbox contains the following 3 functions:

DetectNucleiCentroid
DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext
DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext and VectorF

DetectorNucleiCentroid.m

---

provides 3 functions, which can be used for the following purposes:

DetectNucleiCentroid DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext and VectorF DetectNucleiCentroid.m returns the centroids for all the nuclei, which are detected with the supplied image (or sub-images). Concretely, here are the functions DetectNucleiCentroid and DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext: DetectNucleiCentroid: Concretely, it uses the function DetectNucleiCentroid.m. DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext: Concretely, it uses the function DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext.m. DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext and VectorF: Let's say you are given a 3D image of nuclei (that is 3D nuclei centroids, or centroids of nuclei centroids), and a vector of coordinates for the centers of the nuclei. You would be able to find out the centers of the nuclei by simply running: `a=DetectorNucleiCentroid(a,coord)`

For example, let's say you want to find out the 3D position of nucleus centroids. You can use: `a=DetectorNucleiCentroid(a)`

Then you can use the function

VectorF to return the coordinates of a vector of length 3 from its vector of 3D coordinates. For example:  $a = [0.4 \ 0.4 \ 0.5; 0.5 \ 0.5 \ 0.5; 0.5 \ 0.4 \ 0.5]$ ;  $X = \text{VectorF}(a)$

The output  $X$  should be a vector of size 3. Then:  $X = X(:,1)$ ;
 $X = X(:,2)$ ;  $X = X(:,3)$ ; Concretely, here are the functions DetectNucleiCentroidsWithContext and VectorF: DetectNucleiCentroids
