The effects of angiotensin II (All) on phospholipase activity were examined in guinea pig papillary muscles. All increased both phosphatidylinositol hydrolysis and phosphatidic acid generation in a dose-dependent manner. The concentration producing half-maximal effects were 0.085 (0.021-0.33) mug/ml and 0.068 (0.0125-0.16) mug/ml, respectively. The effects of All were significant when concentrations lower than 0.1 mug/ml were used. In contrast to the effects on phospholipase A2 activity, prostaglandin E2 did not affect phospholipase activity.
